Free meal project underway

by Helen Martin

When young Helensville mother Katey Jackson got to thinking about what kind of initiative would help local families with a new baby, she came up with the idea of a community-supported free meal project. Helensville Birthing Centre and Helensville District Health Trust liked the idea and, after a lot of planning and fund raising through GiveALittle, the Te Kete Whāngaiō Parakai project, aimed at giving each local family three free frozen meals on their departure from the Birthing Centre, was born.

In mid-December, a small group of women made up of community volunteers and people from the Birthing Centre and the Health Trust spent a day at Te Whare Orangaō Parakai, the community centre owned by the Trust, cooking around 100 lasagne, macaroni cheese and vegetarian soup meals. As one of the volunteers I was really impressed by the professionalism of this first cook-a-thon where, under the calm tutelage of Kitchen and Catering manager Keryn Reardon, we were first initiated into the mysteries of cooking in a commercial kitchen, then guided through the process of the hygienic production of large quantities of food. For those of us more used to a domestic scale, methods for washing the huge pots at the end were something of a revelation – I'm looking forward to having another go at it.

Depending on funding, it's intended that the project will eventually expand. As Health Trust Manager

Nicola Keen-Biggelaar explains, "While we're starting with new families, once we're up and running we'll expand the service to include the elderly, the unwell and families in crisis."

Mark Dennis wins big

When Helensville local Mark Dennis set up a community fruit and vege stand outside his Puriri St home at the beginning of 2018 he had no idea that by the end of the year he would be given the prestigious title of NZ Gardener of the Year. The award, given by NZ's oldest gardening magazine and decided by popular vote, annually recognises our 'horticultural superheroes'. It's a sign of the times that a project aimed at preventing food waste and enabling people to share their excess was the most popular of all the initiatives in the 2018 final. Mark is delighted with his win, especially because it reflects the fact that the idea spreading so fast - there are now more than 150 free fruit and vegetable stands from Kaitaia to Invercargill — is evidence of people looking to share and connect with others in their communities.

In supporting this grassroots movement Mark's Facebook page, Community Fruit and Vege Stands, is an invaluable place for people to share thoughts and advice about how to set up and maintain a stand and to let people know what a stand currently has on offer. Posts such as "Kiwi fruit, plums, kale, broadbeans, rhubarb and a pumpkin available at the stand tonight as of 6.30pm. Lyttelton Street, Spreydon, Chch", "Our Parakai stand has had a revamp and been moved to 6 Fordyce Road" and "I manage the stand in Piopio, a small rural community in the King Country. It's been a huge commitment of time and effort but incredibly fun and rewarding. It's been great to see the community participate and take ownership, both in sharing and enjoying the surplus", are a great reflection of what the project is all about.

Good on you Mark!

MOTV8N to succeed Make 2019 your year

Kim McNamara

Well 2019 is well and truly here.

How has it been so far?

Some of those New Year Resolutions might have already gone out the door, or maybe not even started.

How do we engage ourselves in our goals and dreams and make them become reality?

Often we can have ideas of things we want to do and we carry them with us for many years. What we forget to do sometimes is update the goal list. A goal that you set years ago might not even be that relevant now, but for whatever reason, we carry it with us as something we need to do.

Goals and Dreams always need to be in line with our values.

Our values are our CORE, what makes up our SOUL, what we live for, what we live by.

Effective goal setting always needs to have that first key to being inline with values. If we are caught up with keeping up with the Jones and keeping up with the "in group", we can often work hard, achieve things and they become bittersweet on completion with success feelings not being that satisfying.

A great thing to do after checking in with your values is to create a Dream Board. Our family have done these for many years, and I have run workshops on Dream Boards. They are fun and very effective for ALL AGES.

The idea of a Dream Board is to think about what you would like to achieve in life, big stuff, small stuff, stuff you think you might never be able to achieve. If it interests you, it is important.
Find some magazines, books, brochures, internet info etc and cut out the pictures around your dreams that you like. Find words or print words that have meaning to you. Make sure all of it is POSITIVE. Arrange them on a big piece of cardboard/ paper. Stick them on your Dream Board and pop that Dream Board up somewhere where you are going to see it often.

The mind is very, very clever. Our conscious mind is busy helping us out with the tasks that we need to be thinking about, and our unconscious mind has a whole load of other processes going on. One of which is being aware of your dream board every time you see it, even if you haven't really consciously noticed you are looking. Its the same thing as putting pictures of goals and dreams on the fridge. We visit the fridge many times a day, we glance at the picture, not really thinking about it too much as we are going to the fridge. Meantime your unconscious mind is noticing and reconfirming over and over that this is important.
The power of positive reinforcement.

So have a think, and have some fun, Maybe you might like to create your own dream board, maybe you might like to create a family one. Kids love this stuff. Be mindful not to put your dreams and input into others dream boards, as we all hold our own values, beliefs, visions and dreams.

GO FORTH, HAVE FUN, MAKE 2019 YOUR YEAR

Christine Roberts

by Helen Martin

Christine Roberts traces her love of antiques back to her English childhood, where her family lived in a big old house filled with antique, mainly Victorian, furniture and her father collected books and musical instruments. Later in life she became keen on antique jewellery and collectables. She's had antique shops in Helensville since 2001 and now, aged 80, when she talks about leaving River Cottage Antiques and Collectables people protest "But you can't retire, you're a fixture!"

Another lifetime interest is music. Her family has a sound musical pedigree, which can be traced at least as far back as the ancestor who was organist at magnificent Worcester Cathedral. Christine's father Harry Botham played in the London Philharmonic Orchestra and, after the family emigrated to New Zealand in 1950, played in NZ's National Symphony Orchestra, conducted orchestras and taught, later receiving an MBE for services to music. Christine learnt the violin from the age of four, had singing lessons and started learning piano at 13, when her pedigree as a performer ground to a halt. "My teacher told me not to waste my father's money on piano lessons because I wasn't very good," she says. "She was quite right." Christine's love of music from then on was enacted in appreciation rather than performance, but she's proud that her son Nick, who was Head of Music at Kaipara College before becoming Deputy Principal, is a leading light on the local music scene.

Christine married young. Her husband Ted Roberts was a naval officer and spent most of his time away from home. With their first child in the care of her mother, Christine went out to work. Over the years she had four children, Christine, Peter, Nicholas and Victoria. "For a lot of the time I brought them up on my own and worked, which was unusual for those days," she says. "But I've always been a bit different."

When she and Ted returned to NZ in 1959 after two years in England Christine had her first job with a jeweller. At Stewart Dawsons in Wellington she learnt how to polish silver and clean jewellery, and how to deal with customers. With interest in antique jewellery sparked, and with no study options available in NZ, she took a part time gemology course by correspondence from England.

A second stint in England from 1962 to 1965 was significant for Christine; working for an estate jeweller founded in the 19th century she learnt more about antique jewellery; she discovered a love of rural living that has never left her; and, always a dog and cat lover, she bred her first puppies, apricot poodles, and entered them in shows. Back in NZ she continued showing, beginning with a puppy she'd bred in the UK, and at the same time provided a home for a succession of Burmese cats. In 1971, the interest in poodles led to her and a friend opening a grooming parlour in Epsom, where for a few years she bathed, clipped and groomed poodles before returning to her old love, the jewellery trade.

Meeting her partner Malcolm Neale provided a very happy turning point in Christine's life. He was a lovely man, she says, very fair and loyal, tolerant of her filling the house up with rescue animals and on-hand to help set up boarding catteries and support her Warkworth SPCA Supporters Group. Malcolm also shared Christine's love of old houses, and in the 33 years they were together they bought and renovated beautiful homes in Kaukapakapa, Warkworth, Wainui and Helensville. "We always left a house in better condition than when we went in." Now living in a modern home, she misses the high ceilings and beautiful timbers.

In 2001 she opened her first antique shop on the ground floor of the historic Post Office in Helensville. She and Malcolm then bought the grand Edwardian house at the northern end of Helensville known as Toad Hall – "we decided to buy it within half an hour of seeing it" – and spent the next seven years doing extensive renovations, selling it only when Malcolm's ill health meant the property had become too difficult for them to maintain. She had bought the antique shop in front of Odd fellows Hall beside the Grand Hotel and ran it for three years before retiring. The retirement lasted six weeks. Christine was bored and, missing the fun of meeting people and buying and selling antiques, set up a new shop at the railway station, working there until her second retirement. On her return she moved operations to the railway museum's former memorabilia room, a smaller space that led her to selling collectables and vintage items rather than large furniture. She now says that, after six years, maybe it's time to retire again.

Christine has had some very dark times in her life – her son Peter and her sister Mavis both died tragically, and last year Malcolm passed away after a long illness. Her way of dealing with loss is stoic – "you just have to get on with it" – but she does wonder how life will be without a shop. All the same, she says she has much to be thankful for. "Although it's just me and the dog I've got jolly good neighbours and I like Helensville. People here are friendly and help each other, like the world used to be. Living here you feel part of the town."

Helensville Christmas

This year's Christmas parade, held on December 8, showed off Helensville's great community spirit.

In the morning Santa was on hand for photographs with the kids, and the floats assembled in West Street and were judged, with the overall winner St Joseph's Church. It was a gorgeous sunny day and the crowds were in a festive mood as they lined Commercial Road and took advantage of the street stalls, raffles, sausage sizzles and bouncy castle.

parade

Dozens of locals took part in the colourful parade, then the fun continued at the Museum grounds with Santa, food, a lolly scramble and entertainment that included Troy Kingi and a kapahaka performance by Kahurangi Ki Kaipara.

Congratulations to the schools, pre-schools, businesses, clubs, groups, organisations and individuals who took part with such good humour and big ups to the team of hard-working volunteers who made it happen.

2019 Sunday Music in the Gardens

January 13th, 20th & 27th - February 3rd & 10th (1.30pm to 4.30pm)

Does spending a Sunday afternoon strolling along our idyllic Sculpture Trail overlooking Kaipara Harbour and then relaxing, maybe with a picnic, listening to some pleasant music sound good?

If so, put these dates into your calendar, as we will once again be hosting our Sunday afternoon Music in the Gardens events from mid-January to mid-February.

There will be a range of talented young local musicians performing a selection of music with a broad spectrum of appeal (definitely not Rap or Heavy Metal J) from early afternoon to closing.

This iconic local attraction has over 40 marvellous new pieces displayed along the beautiful 1 km nature trail.

The trail is constructed of a smooth gravel pathway and meanders through rolling hills passing by a mix of native bush, wetlands as well as formal gardens and also has some beautiful views of the Kaipara Harbour.*

There is also a Petanque area and children's playground as well as our cute little coffee shop on site plus the Plant Centre for

Helensville women's 7s

There had not been a Helensville women's 7s team for nearly 20 years and in that time talented local players played for other clubs. So, it was about time we had our local ladies playing for their home town, where 97% of the team were born and bred Villians.

In September last year the task began to get a team ready for the annual North Harbour Club 7s tournament played in November. The coaching staff was led by duo Andy Hill and Foustu Tuivaiti, along with trainer Billy May. Roxy Foreman was manager.

The team travelled to Warkworth on 3 November, where they played three pool games, a semi-final and the final. They went through the day unbeaten, winning the final to receive the trophy for Women's Harbour Club Champs 2018.

Team members for the tournament were Caitlyn Cox, Tamara Keefe, Mena Sinisa, Madi Wells, Sophie Fisher, Stacey Tupe, Juliana Newman, Carissa Mansell-Sawyers, Hailey Beale, Aleiscia Phillips, Tara Mansell-Sawyers, Zoe Mandela-Sawyers, Jojo Eichler.

Since then, five team members have been selected to represent the North Harbour Women's 7s team at the Regionals Qualifiers tournament. They are Sophie Fisher, Stacey Tupe, Madi Wells, Caitlyn Cox, Juliana Newman.

The team would like to thank all the supporters, club member Nick Mulvaney and Andy Cummings from Kumeu Meat Processors.

Helensville are hoping to enter a women's 15s or 10s team next season. If you are interested, please contact the rugby club at 162 Awaroa Rd, Helensville. Ph 420 8116.

Dressed for Christmas

In early December a conversation on the Helensville and Parakai Community Facebook page led to the organisation of a community event to decorate the town, with Vicki Sisson appealing to people to come along and join in "for our town's pride."

After meeting outside the WINZ building one evening around 30 people, who added their own decorations to those kindly donated by Parakai 4 Square and The Dollar City, set to and did the business. Among those who turned up was a group of rangatahi (young people) from Te Whānau Tōhea, which is part of youth provider Outwest Youth Community Trust.

Public response was very positive and there are high hopes that dressing our town for Christmas will become an annual event.

Te Whānau Tōhea was well represented.

Vicki Sisson and Louise Shaw, ready to go.

Helensville MP, Chris Penk opens Sculpture Gardens 2019 Exhibition

Sunday 9th December saw Chris Penk, the MP for the Helensville Electorate, open the 2019 Exhibition at the Kaipara Coast Plant Centre and Sculpture Gardens just North of Kaukapakapa.

The event attracted over 100 people who thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon with many complimentary comments being forthcoming regarding both the event and the Gardens.

In his opening speech Chris highlighted the diversity and imaginative nature of the exhibits as well as the magnificent setting in which they are being displayed. He also commented on how art reflects the many different facets of life using a number of humorous analogies including some Parliamentary ones.

He also spoke of how lucky the area is to have such a wonderful facility in such close proximity and thanked all the participating artists, organisers and staff for their efforts in making the exhibition possible.

Thanks were also offered by owner David Bayly and the new exhibition curator Shea O'Neil to everyone involved as well as to the outgoing curator Sally Lush who has been putting together the exhibition since its inception 11 years ago and has now moved on to a new challenge in Whangarei.

Many of the contributing artists were also at the event to answer questions and explain their work.

The event also included some delightful finger food and light refreshments served by the staff throughout the afternoon as well as music performed by local singer/guitarist Ben Bradley and which could be heard throughout the garden. This, combined with the very accommodating weather, ensured a relaxing and very successful opening event.

Exhibition History & Details:

The sculpture gardens, which opened in 2008, have been developed in conjunction with Kaipara Coast Plant Centre which has been owned and operated by David and Geraldine Bayly from this site since 1988.

The Sculpture Trail is open to the public 364 days a year and features a 2km garden and forest trail showcasing more than 40 vibrant and diverse sculptures by emerging and established New Zealand and international artists which are renewed in November every year.

Contributing artists for this years' exhibition include:

Glen Colechin; Rebecca Rose; Blair Logan; Christian Nicolson; Cinzah Merckens; Fiona Henderson; Jim Elliss; Jo May; Oriah Rapley; Sen McGlinn; Sonja van Kerkhoff; Yelz, Zoe Nash; Colin Wightman; John Mulholland; Kaukapakapa Venturers; Maggy Johnston; Mandy Cherry Joass; Karen Sewell; Larisse Hall; Simon Gray; Gaye Jurisich; Jan Simmons; Vaimoana Eves; Aaron Frater; Ema Frost; Component; Rustic Twist; Kerstin Hedström; Canny Creations; Louise Purvis; Richard Wedekind; Lipika Sen; Prabhjyot Majithia; Jeff Thompson and others.
